Town Board Acts

The town board has instructed the police judge to enforce the town ordinance against stock running at large. All cattle or other stock must be kept on owner's premises or accompanied by owner or attendant when driven along the street.

The police judge was also reminded that automobiles are prohibited from the use of the highway and streets of the town unless equipped with lawful license tags.

A speed limit of twenty miles has been set for the town and speeders are liable to wake up in jail hereafter.

Premature

The Courier was a little premature, to say the least, last week in announcing the marriage of Kenneth Fairchild and Miss Melda Cox. The young people had, in company with another young couple, gone off on a trip and our informant just knew something that was not true. We are glad to make this correction but it will afford the Courier real pleasure to chronicle the event in a regular way real soon.

It pays to read the ads.

WEST LIBERTY SCHOOL NOTES

The following students are absent from the sophomore room: Estelle Davis, Russell Brown and Stanley Oney.

Final examinations for the first semester will begin Wednesday at 1:45 and close Friday at 3:15.

Elizabeth Williams and Olive Fannin are absent from the senior room.

William Childers and Charles Burton are absent from Miss McClure's room on account of illness.

Miss Selma McClain is absent on account of illness.

Fifteen pupils are absent from the 4th and 5th grade room. We hope everyone will hurry and get well again.

Several pupils are absent from Mrs. Turner's room on account of chicken pox and flu.

Eighteen pupils are absent from Mrs. Mathis' room on account of the flu.

The school has received the pencils ordered by the P. T. A. and they have been distributed 100 to each room.

The second semester will begin January 9th.

Three pupils are absent from the freshman room on account of illness.

The following new subjects will be offered the second semester: Advanced Arithmetic, Agriculture, Book Keeping and American History (last half).

The P. T. A. will hold its 5th meeting of the year Monday January 9 at 7:00 P. M. in the high school building.

KEEPS MEMORY GREEN

Crandon, Wis. Dec. 28, 1932
Inclosed herewith you will find my check in the sum of $1.50, renewing my subscription to your paper for the coming year. Its pages are small but it is always full of familiar names and news of Morgan county, my old home of many years ago.

I see in this paper every week the names of people who were our neighbors and friends when I was a small boy over forty years ago.

I am not a newspaper writer. I have very seldom written a letter to a newspaper. But at this time of the year we should all take a little time to take stock or inventory of our lives and find out if we have done anything during the past year that is worthy of, or has made us worthy of, the blessings we have been permitted to enjoy.

Let us be careful not to boast of any good that we may have done; if we have done anything worthy let us be thankful that we were able and willing to do it. We should renew our covenants with our Father in heaven and with our friends at the beginning of the new year that we may live more godly and that our lives may be so ordered that after we are done, when we have sung our last song and said our last prayer in this our natural life, those whom we have left behind who have known us may be glad that we lived. While reflecting over these thoughts my mind is brought back to my childhood days in Morgan county, when my father, Hiram Branham, lived one mile below the old mussel shoal on Licking river. I am sure that the Courier has some readers yet who will remember my father. These were the good old days when every one knew his neighbor; it would require a lot of space for me to express my thoughts and write all the things that I would like to say at this very time making brief mention of the many things that have transpired during all these years. So I will close my letter by wishing the Courier and all my many friends in Morgan county a very happy and prosperous new year.

Very truly yours,
S. T. Branham

Louis A. Johnson, National Commander of the American Legion, will deliver a talk over NBC National radio hook up Saturday January 7th at 9:30 P. M. on the subject of Ex-Service Men's Compensation and all are urged to hear him.

Congress in Its Dotage

The Congress of the United States is in its dotage. It has become enmeshed in the coils of selfish interests and its own admission is unable to extricate itself therefrom.

For three years the Federal Government has been steadily and continually spending money it did not have. Congress is even now engaged in its third attempt to collect enough revenue from unorganized groups so that the country may have the semblance of solvency.

But this is impossible. That it is impossible under present conditions, even Congress itself recognizes. But Congress has lacked the courage, the ability to lay the ax to the root of the whole matter.

The most important step in managing a budget, big or small, is to so regulate the expenses as to maintain at least an approach to the receipts for any given period. This Congress has not done. It has created offices and salaries and it has authorized, by act or implication, other officers and salaries the usefulness of which, from the public's standpoint, has ceased. It is conservatively estimated that one fourth of the money which the Federal Government is now spending and which it does not have can be saved by abolishing certain offices and bureaus or by combining certain of these bureaus with other departments of government.

Congress admits that because of selfish groups it is powerless to act in the interest of the people. But something must be done. The ultimate ability of the poor man to pay taxes has been passed. Reduced expenses is the only solution. Even Congress now admits that.

And how shall this be done? Weep not for the dead. The same Congress which has on occasion shown much concern about its constitutional rights is spending valuable time in enacting a bill in which it (Congress) seeks to lay this whole mess on the doorstep of the president elect. Constitutional rights may be sacred but it were better for the future of our country if constitutional duty were considered even more so.

If any reader of this paper is still skeptical as to the impotency of Congress he may find a big block of evidence in the attitude of the present Congress on the liquor question. When it became evident that the limit of tax extraction from the poor man, by ordinary means had been reached, Congress aided and abetted a group of millionaire taxpayers in an effort to extract the last penny by a method which had been discarded in our country after a century of devoted effort by the foremost citizenship of our land. Although a license on liquor never yielded beyond a fraction of a percent in revenue on its cost it had demonstrated its ability to take the last good garment from the back of the washerwoman and the last pair of shoes from the feet of needy children. Gentle readers do not think nor say anything harsh, it is not the fault of Congress; Congress is in its dotage.

Under different conditions it is conceivable that the present crisis might have marked the beginning of the decline of our civilization. As though guided by a divine hand the American Citizenship has called to leadership a man in whom the traits of human sympathy, compassion and fellow feeling have not been dulled by the lusts of office.

When apprised of the intention of Congress to shift the responsibility of cutting government costs to meet government revenue by dismissing useless salaried officials and by consolidating bureaus and departments Mr. Roosevelt is said to have indicated his intention to do the job. Let us here pay tribute to the single spark of vitality which enables Congress to use the only means of salvation within its reach.

And herein lies the source for the revitalization of Congress itself. Selfish interests and self seeking groups must not be handed reins and whip in a free country. We have unbounded faith in the man who has been called to leadership. His reserve of genuine humanity, his sense of justice, his fount of genuine democracy is unbounded. Let Congress drink deeply at this fount.

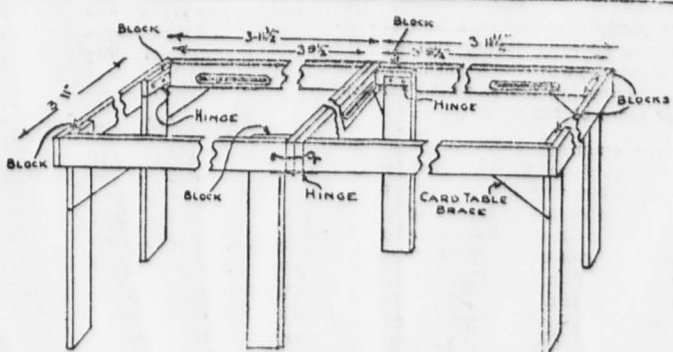

Best Clubbing Offer

We have just closed arrangements for our annual clubbing offer with the Louisville Courier Journal and Louisville Times. During January and February we can offer to rural residents, where the Courier Journal has no carrier service, either the daily Courier Journal or the daily Louisville Times and the Licking Valley Courier each one full year for $4.50. Offer not good after February 28.

Get West Building

S. S. Franklin and Stanley Ryan have formed a partnership and rented the street level floor of the West Building on Main street. The new firm will be open for business at once and the line of goods carried considerably increased. Mr. Franklin has had varied experience in a business way here and will add push and vigor to the steadily maintained business of Stanley Ryan.

How to Make It

THE tennis table shown here can be easily made by anyone handy with tools. Because it is somewhat smaller than the regulation table it does not require as much room and when not in use it can be folded compactly and stored in a closet.

The materials required are 4 pieces of soft wood 1 in. x 4 in. x 3 ft. 3/4 in. for sides of frames; 4 pieces 1 in. x 4 in. x 3 ft. 11 in. for ends of frames; 8 blocks 1 in. x 3 in. x 5 in. for corner braces; 6 pieces 1 in. x 4 in. x 2 ft. 3/4 in. for legs; 1 piece quarter-inch pressed wood 4 x 8 ft.; 2 hinges 3/4 in. x 3 in. on each flange; six hinges 1 in. x 4 in.; six card table braces or Bessemer rods, which may be had at a hardware store; two three-inch screen door hooks and screw eyes; and a few screws.

Make two frames 3 ft. 11 in. by 3 ft. 3/4 in. each by letting the longer pieces overlap the ends of the shorter pieces at the corners. Strengthen two corners in each frame with blocks as shown, making the edges flush with the top edge of the frame. Hinge each corner leg to the bottom of the block or corner brace, allowing half an inch between the inside of the frame and the edge of the leg for the free passage of the Bessemer rods. Hinge the two middle legs in the same way so that one folds towards one side of the table and the other toward the other side. Attach the Bessemer rods as on a card table.

Join the two frames together on their shorter sides by placing the shorter hinges at the bottom so that one frame can fold against the other. There remains now only the top. Pressed wood is used because it will not buckle or warp. Have your lumber dealer saw it in two pieces 4 ft. x 4 ft., cautioning him to keep the edges true. Screw one piece to each frame, letting it extend one-half inch beyond the frame on all sides except where the two frames are joined. The screws may be countersunk and covered with plastic wood. When the table is set up it is held rigid by a hook on either side.

If desired, the legs can be tapered to 1 x 3 inches at the bottom.

LAFFOON TALKS BUSINESS

At the Louisville Board of Trade's annual New Year reception the Governor of Kentucky took occasion to outline what will be his tax policy as embodied in his recommendation to the session of the state legislature to convene in January 1934.

It will be remembered that at the last session of the legislature in a frantic effort to get more revenue a general sales tax was advocated by the Governor after efforts had failed to pass a general income tax measure and other measures taxing public service corporations and natural resource products of the state. The protest against a general sales tax were so great that a near riot occurred at the Governor's home in Frankfort by indignant and perhaps over zealous citizens of the state. The measure was lost at that time but let Governor now announces his intention to force the measure through the coming legislature.

The Governor bases his argument for a general sales tax on the statement that he recommends that the people of the state will adopt a constitutional amendment which will allow the abolishment of a state tax on real estate. The Governor says this proposition is to be voted on at the coming election. He may be right, but it is our understanding that a constitutional amendment must be passed by two successive legislatures before being submitted to the people for a vote, and it is also our understanding that this amendment was duly passed at the last session of the legislature but had not been passed by the session immediately before that.

But anyhow the Governor is on a slippery foundation when he offers the loss of state revenue from real estate as an excuse for a general sales tax. In his campaign speeches the Governor advocated the abolition of the state real estate tax, stating that for many years it had cost the state almost as much to levy and collect this tax as it amounted to.

As far as voting for the proposed amendment is concerned the people have their minds made up and are ready to vote for it this fall or any other time. They don't need anybody's advice to do that.

The Governor further told the Board of Trade that he will recommend to the legislature a law making a definite appropriation to retire some part of the state's outstanding warrants each year. That's a good suggestion but a much better one would be to so conduct the state's business that no more warrants could be issued for any department of the state government in any year than money had been duly appropriated to that department and the money thus appropriated duly collected and allocated. What will be the net benefit to the state if this year we pay off, say $1,000,000 in outstanding warrants then issue $1,500,000 new warrants for which there has been no money collected?

The Governor's third idea is not a new one but the reason advanced for it is new. The Governor says he will recommend that one-half of the state's motor license fees be returned to the various counties of the state divided in equal sums to each county. Many of the counties the Governor says cannot pay the bonds they owe and the Governor would earmark this money so that it would first go to pay on the bonded debt in each county where such debt existed. In counties without any bonded debt the money would go toward the construction of county roads under the supervision of the state. There is much merit in this last proposition. But whatever merit there may be would be more than lost if the money to finance the proposition should have to come, though even indirectly, from a general sales tax.

LEGION ACTIVITIES

The Economy League is still striving to cut down ex-service men's compensation and the American Legion is determined to fight the battle for all ex-service men that all may be able to retain their present compensation ratings and payments. But we must all pull together as a unit leaving no stones unturned if we are to continue on the present compensation basis.

The Legion will hold its regular meeting Saturday January 7th, at 1 P. M. in the K of P Hall, at which time a plan of coping with the Economy League will be discussed, and every ex-service man is urged to be present.

I AM THE FARMER

I am the provider for all mankind. Upon me every human being constantly depends.

A world itself is built upon my toil, my products, my honesty.

Because of my industry, America, my country, leads the world. Her prosperity is maintained by me; her great commerce is the work of my good hands; her "balance of trade" springs from the furrows of my farm.

My reaper brings food for today, my plows hold promise for tomorrow.

In war I am absolute; in peace I am indispensable—my country's surest defense and constant reliance.

I am the very soul of America, the hope of a race, the balance wheel of civilization.

When I prosper, men are happy; when I fail, all the world suffers.

I live with Nature, walk in the green fields under the golden sunlight, out in the Great Alone where brain and brawn and toil supply mankind's primary need. And I try to do my humble part to carry out the great plan of God.

Even the birds are my companions; they greet me with a symphony at the new day's dawn and chum with me 'till the evening prayer is said.

If it were not for me the treasures of the earth would remain securely locked; the granaries would be useless frames; man himself would be doomed speedily to extinction or decay.

Through me is produced the energy that maintains the spark of life.

I rise with the early dawn and retire when the "chores" of the world are done.

I am your true friend. I am the Farmer.—Exchange.

PATTON

J. D. Patton a life time resident of Soldier in Carter county died at his home on December 30, aged 75 years, 9 months and 25 days.

Mr. Patton was married February 23, 1880 to Rebecca Garvin who preceded him to the spirit world a few years ago.

Five children—Ethel, Mayme Wylie and Evert of Soldier, Ernest of Morehead and Claud of Olive Hill—and a brother, Billie, of Arkansas survive.

Mr. Patton was a member of the Christian Church and also a member of the Masonic lodge at Soldier for many years.

Funeral services were conducted at the late home of the deceased on New Year's Day by Rev. Harlan Murphy of West Liberty, supplement by the regular Masonic rites.

A crowd estimated at 500 people of whom about 100 were Masons attended the services.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

1933 Tobacco Crop

No one knows anything about the price tobacco will bring in 1933, but most all farmers of Morgan county who grew tobacco this past year, will more than likely grow some next year. It might be that too much tobacco will be produced next year, and again it might be a crop failure because of drouth and many other things which can effect the crop. Anyway, what can be grown in Morgan county will be only a drop in the bucket. The Kentucky Experiment Station does not recommend a larger acreage, but a less acreage with better quality.

Many farmers of Morgan county who intend to raise tobacco failed to do so because of poor plant beds, and others who had plants had very poor crops because they depended upon poor soils. Since the plant bed is the first important essential, every farmer who expects to grow tobacco next year, should inform himself as to best methods to use in producing plants of high quality. The good tobacco grower insists that good early plants determine the size and quality of the crop. This type of grower is already planning and getting ready for his tobacco plant beds.

The tobacco bed should be located near a good source of water so the bed can be watered whenever necessary. If the bed fails because of drouth it shows poor judgement on the part of the manager who should have watered it. Good soil, proper burning and fertilization are important factors. The side boards or logs should be well placed and a good grade of canvas used so as to exclude as much cold air as possible. We saw many failures last year caused by poor construction and bad canvas which permitted too much air circulation. Last but not least is insect control. The farmer who sows a bed should arm himself with Bordeaux mixture, paris green and arsenate of lead and some kind of spray gun or duster to apply the poison. And this should be done before the insects appear. See your county agent for all the necessary information.

Soils

Many tobacco and potato failures are due to poor soils or to poor plowing. Both of these valuable crops should be grown on the best soils on the farm, that is, excepting the garden spot. Some authorities claim that a successful tobacco crop cannot be grown on soil that will not produce during a good season, 50 bushels of corn to the acre. Potatoes require even better soil. Also, it is recommended that such soils be plowed deep sometime during the fall or winter so a large amount of water will be stored up for the growing season.

During the spring of 1932, many hills of potatoes were dug into and it was discovered that the seed pieces had been placed on hard unbroken soil. The soil should be broken to a depth of 8 to 10 inches and the seed pieces planted about five inches deep. This will give 4 or 5 inches of broken soil below the seed pieces. All fertilizers and manure should be placed about 4 inches underneath the surface, where the plant roots grow and should be well mixed with the soil.

4-H Clubs

A large number of boys and girls at the Ezel school have put in their application for membership in the 4-H club. Professor Davis, Miss Conrad and the other teachers are behind the move. The club will be organized in January.

About 20 boys and girls have applied for membership in a club which will be organized at Cannel City. Professor Lewis and all the teachers are heartily in favor and expressed a desire for a good club at their school.

Mr. J. D. Benton, club leader at Caney, is planning to have his club accomplish some outstanding work for 1933. He plans for his club to take part in all club activities during 1933, to raise some real corn, tobacco and pigs and do other project work.

The clubs at War creek and Williams creek are not to be left behind, but have decided to go over the top with some fine project work and to take part in all club activities. Miss Mary Williams of the Williams creek club has returned from a three months visit to a sister in Harlan, and is getting her club together for an organization meeting in January. She is a real leader and out to win in 1933.

Clubs will be organized at Consolation school, Fielding school, Stacy Fork, Crockett, Goad Ridge and other places in the county. Any community in Morgan county is entitled to a 4-H Club. All that is necessary is an enrollment of ten or more boys and girls between 10 and 18 years of age and to write to Chas. E. Gabbard, West Liberty, Ky. telling of the enrollment. Then a date will be set for the organization meeting.

The Brick Brooder

Quite a few men have asked for information regarding the construction of the brick brooder. Circulars on the subject may be had at the county agents office. Early hatched chickens sell for the best price, and early hatched pullets lay eggs in the fall and winter when egg prices are best. The brick brooder properly constructed will enable one to raise chickens during February and March. It is a loss of time and money and a pity to attempt to raise chickens without a mother hen or a brooder of some kind. It takes only about 150 bricks and some clay or mud to build a brick brooder, and wood is ideal for fuel. See the county agent for particulars.

Kentucky Farm Radio Program

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WHAS the week of January 9. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

Jan. 9—Tobacco market. Tips from the cow tester, Jim and Mr. White.

Jan. 10—Tobacco market. Poultry pointers for January, C. E. Harris.

Jan. 11—Tobacco market. Korean lespezea. Ralph Kenney.

Jan. 12—Tobacco market. Timely chats with the fruit growers, C. O. Eddr.

Jan. 13—Tobacco market. What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

When To Spray

The application of a dormant spray to apple trees for San Jose scale insects during a period of good weather before the buds open is recommended by Dr. C. O. Eddy, of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Since scale insects have been increasing in Kentucky during the last few years, there is additional reason for a most careful application of a good spray.

This dormant spray for apple trees does not need to contain a fungicide for the control of diseases as is the case with the dormant spray for peach trees which controls peach leaf curl.

Trees lightly infested with the San Jose scale show small grayish, dis-shaped spots that are just discernable to the unaided eye. On smooth bark and on young trees, the bark around the scale frequently becomes red. Where the infestation is heavy the entire surface is covered with an overlapping grayish layer of the insects.

These scale insects cause a decrease in tree vigor and growth, and kill twigs and even whole limbs. Foliage frequently becomes thin and yellow. Fruit is frequently covered with spots of these gray insects surrounded by a reddish, inflamed area on the fruit, caused by the feeding of the insect.

For the dormant spray use either oil emulsions or liquid lime-sulfur. The oil emulsions may be purchased as such or may be made at home. They will give a little better control of scale insects than the lime-sulfur. In orchards where there are few scale insects, the oil may be used at 2 per cent strength, but where the infestation is average or above a 3 per cent emulsion should be used.

Lime-sulfur concentrate should be diluted with 8 parts of water.

Spray service leaflet No. 9 tells how to prepare tank-mixed oil emulsions for apple trees at home by using the special grade of oil, calcium caseinate and water. Write to the College of Agriculture for it.

AIR CONDITIONING ELIMINATES DUST

Housekeeping Lightened by Modern Types of Heating, Cooling Plants.

STREAKS and smudges on the walls adjacent to the warm air grilles through which warm air heating systems deliver heat into rooms are unwarranted, says the Holland Institute of Thermology of Holland, Mich., and there is no need for unsightliness in this particular, for modern air-conditioning systems humidify the home air and by washing, eliminate practically all of the dust that may be in it.

Home owners should understand, says the Institute, that it is impossible for dust, smoke, or grime of any sort to find its way into the living quarters of a home through the heat or cold-air ducts of a well constructed warm-air heating system. Likewise, it is impossible for smoke or dirt from the heater itself to get into the heating chamber and thence into the house.

About 50 per cent of the winter household dust filters into the cracks around doors and windows. As it floats in the air it is caught by air currents. The strongest currents are immediately at the face of the grille, and the dust is impacted against and adheres to the wall, continually contributing to the density of smudges. Were basements frequently cleaned, there would be little dust from this source entering upstairs rooms. Ordinarily, about 25 per cent of the household dirt comes from unclean basements and careless firing. Chimney drafts should be open and checks closed when coal is placed in furnace, to prevent smoke and gases belching into basement. Register box and frame of the grille should be tightly sealed into the wall to overcome smudging from this source. The best means of eliminating basement dust lies in keeping basement clean, and more care in firing.

Another way of keeping down household dust, aside from the constant use of the dust cloth or dust mop, lies in keeping the house air adequately moistened during the heating season. Dust is increased in the average home because the home air is too dry. If the air is suitably moistened, linty dust accumulations from household effects are reduced to a minimum, and any dust that may be in the air becomes moisture laden, and sinks to the floor. Adequate moisture is economically and automatically supplied by home air-conditioning systems of the vapor air type. These are equipped with a humidifier which receives a continual water supply direct from the house main, thus assuring the evaporation of sufficient water each day to overcome the moisture deficiency of winter air. Housewives will find that adequately moistened home air will contribute largely to reducing the burden of housework, and preserve the cleanliness of walls and woodwork.

THE TAX MENACE A GROWING CRISIS

By FRANCIS H. SISSON
President American Bankers Association

NO danger, economic or social, more seriously menaces our life, happiness and prosperity than the rising tide of taxes which threaten to engulf us. This is not simply a problem of the depression. It has been developing for many years, growing more serious all the time. The depression merely brought it to a climax. Unless drastic steps are taken to reverse this trend the problem will not end with the depression. It will continue to weigh down and retard progress for an indefinite period.

F. H. SISSON

In city, county, state and nation the orgy of spending has run on. It is estimated that in the United States the total cost of all government is nearly five times what it was before the World War. Many localities have been brought to the verge of bankruptcy by their expenditures, while many have saddled their citizens with a debt burden that will darken their lives and hamper their progress for years to come.

The total cost of Federal, state and local government in the United States is estimated at forty-six million dollars a day. Based on national income in 1930, this represents about one-fifth the total income of our people, or about $110 for every individual in the nation. Total taxes in 1931 are estimated to have taken more than 22 per cent of the national income. It is occasion for serious thought on the part of everyone when one day's income out of every four or five must be contributed to the maintenance of government machinery.

Reductions Possible

United States Government expenditures were reduced one hundred and forty million dollars during the first quarter of the current fiscal year. The recent action of bankers in calling a halt to unnecessary expenditures of New York City as prerequisite to loans in the country's metropolis, which is second in its expenditures to only the Federal Government. No state in the Union, in fact, no other government on this hemisphere, spends half as much as this one city. These savings in Federal and municipal costs are only the beginning of a movement needed throughout the country, if we are to be led out of depression into prosperity.

Unless the people can be made to realize that money for governmental expenditure can come only from their own pockets as taxpayers, casting depressing effects on both individual effort and general business, there is an imminent threat that we may be forced to meet economic difficulties similar to those that have so seriously handicapped other countries. The question is not primarily one of merely paring government salaries or shaving budgets, but rather of curtailing government activities for which we cannot afford to pay.

The idea that money for these mounting extravaganzas can be raised by following the slogan "Soak the Rich" is utterly fallacious, for such a policy will simply exterminate "the rich" and eliminate sources of revenue. It is also important to realize that corporate business in this country is in no position to withstand the effects of indefinite advances in tax rates. Current earnings reports reveal that fact beyond shadow of doubt. The tax base must be broadened, and it therefore seems likely that Congress will be called upon to reconsider the sales tax, at least as a temporary measure to help meet a critical condition in the nation's finance.

Deposit 'Guarantee' Fails of Purpose

LOS ANGELES.—While the idea of the guarantee of bank deposits by some legally enforced plan seems to appeal to many people who give it casual thought, the fact is that it has not only failed in every instance in the eight states where the experiment was tried, but actually produced unsound banking and increased the number of failures. It was declared by the recent convention of the American Bankers Association held here.

"Guaranty of bank deposits carries an idea that naturally appeals to people in general on casual consideration," the declaration said. "However, in principle it is unsound and in practice it is unworkable. It has been tried in eight States and it has not only failed in every case, but it has resulted in increasing the number of bank failures. Taxing properly managed banks to make up losses of failed banks is not only unfair and unreasonable, but it weakens the whole banking structure. Again, guaranty of deposits places the incompetent and reckless banker on an equal footing with the able and conservative banker, which encourages bad banking at the expense of sound banking. We are therefore opposed to the passage of any law carrying a guaranty of bank deposits and believe that it is against the interest of the people of the United States to develop any such system."

Mock Filet Mignon for Economy

By Jane Rogers

IN these days, when less expensive meat dishes are sometimes a necessity, one nevertheless wishes to preserve the attractiveness of the main course. For instance, hamburger steak, which contains the rich body-building properties of an expensive tenderloin, can be a dignified and delightful part of the menu. In the role of mock filet mignon, it is quite a different proposition from the plain meat ball, both in looks and in flavor.

In preparing meats, especially the cheaper cuts which require more careful seasoning to make them tasty, good cooks find sugar as useful as salt and pepper in bringing out the full meat flavor. It is used in this recipe and heightens the mingled savor of beef and bacon.

Mock Filet Mignon

Mix 1½ pounds of finely ground chuck or rump steak with one tablespoon ground suet, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of sugar, ¼ teaspoon of pepper and paprika to taste. Mix well; make into flat cakes one inch thick; twist a thin slice of bacon around each cake and fasten with a toothpick. Broil or pan broil 15 to 20 minutes. As the meat cooks, the bacon strips shrink and fit snugly around the cake, looking very much like the membrane which surrounds a real filet.

What Is a "Cockle"?

A COLD weather breakfast is one that ought to warm not only your stomach but also the cockles of your heart.

We've always been in doubt as to just what part of the heart the "cockle" was, so we looked it up in the dictionary. The one we consulted obligingly informed us that cockle means "the fire-chamber or dome of a hot-air furnace, hence the inner chamber of the heart." We had always thought that the mouth was the hot-air chamber of the body, especially in a presidential election year, but we suppose the dictionary was right. At any rate it's a very gratifying feeling to have that and add a very little sugar if de-particular portion of your anatomy warmed, and here's the way to do it with a breakfast containing all the fruit, cereal, meat, coffee and other ingredients the heart could desire.

A Better Breakfast

Orange Sections in Iced Grapefruit Juice

Hot Cereal with Raisins

Broiled Calves' Liver and Bacon

Poached Coffee Apple Butter

The delicious fruit dish which begins this breakfast is made by cutting the peel from four oranges and removing the sections with a knife, being careful to discard all white fibre. Then pour over them ice cold grapefruit juice from a No. 2 can which has been kept for a long time in the refrigerator, and add a very little sugar if desired. This serves six to eight people, and the whole breakfast is guaranteed to warm that many cockles, whatever they are.

Christmas Desserts

PUMPKIN pie is as much a part of Christmas festivities as old Santa Claus himself.

So, without more ado, we're going to tell you how to make a regular Country Pumpkin Pie: Smooth one-half cup cottage cheese, or pass it through a sieve, and then mix it with one and one-third cups canned pumpkin. Add two-thirds cup sugar, mixed with two-thirds teaspoon salt, two-thirds teaspoon ginger, two-thirds teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, two beaten eggs and one and one-third cups milk. Heat in a double boiler, and pour into a pie tin lined with pastry. Bake, having oven hot—450 degrees—for first ten minutes, then reduce to 325 degrees for remaining time, about thirty minutes or until knife comes out clean. This makes one pie.

A Pumpkin Pudding

You can make puddings with pumpkins, as well as pies. Try Harvest Indian Pudding: Scald four cups milk, add one-half cup cornmeal, and cook for five minutes, stirring all the time. Add three-fourths cup sugar, one teaspoon allspice, one-half teaspoon ginger, one-half teaspoon salt, six tablespoons butter and one cup (one-fourth a No. 3 can) of pumpkin. Add two beaten eggs, pour into a buttered baking dish, and bake like a custard in a slow oven, 325 degrees, until knife comes out clean—about one to one and a quarter hours. Serve warm with butter or cream. Serves eight.*

Times Are Picking Up

(WVU Service)

DAPHNE STONE sat with dangling feet on the washtub in the kitchenette for the very good reason that there were no longer any chairs to sit upon. They had been packed, along with the other furniture of Daphne's apartment and stored in the basement in hopes that the obliging janitor might later on be able to sell them to some incoming tenant. Daphne's big brother, Robert, leaned nonchalantly against the gas stove from which the gas had been turned off, and their friend, Malcolm Hughes, rested with what comfort he could on the radiator by the window.

They were all eating delicatessen potato salad with pasteboard forks and pasteboard plates. Daphne got down from the tubs to pass a bag of rolls.

"I bought nine of them," she said. "If we each have one now, we can have two each for lunch on the way up. Maybe we can buy some milk and fruit cheap from a farmer."

"Oh, Fred will stake us to dinner before we get there," Malcolm told Daphne. "And he says we are welcome to the provisions he left when he was up in June—coffee and flour and sugar and things like that, and probably we can catch some fish in the river tomorrow."

"Nothing like that fresh country air," agreed Robert. "And Fred says there are still plenty of blueberries. It's practically certain that either Malcolm or I will have work later on, helping the farmers pick apples or pitch hay or something of the sort."

"We'll manage to get through the winter all right—and maybe it's just as well not to have any regular work because we'll have time to read up on farming before it's time to begin planting in the spring," said Malcolm.

Of the three, the young architect, Malcolm Hughes, had been the first to feel the effects of depression. For over a year now he had had no work. His optimism about getting employment had diminished along with his savings. At first Robert Stone had taken his dose of depression in a series of salary cuts. Six months ago he found himself walking away from his office with his last pay envelope in his pocket—thirty dollars plus a little slip that told him his services were no longer needed. Having gone through his own meager bank account he was forced to accept his sister's bounty and now for three months he had shared her small apartment and simple meals with her. Two weeks ago Daphne had been one of the last interior decorators to be laid off at Bradley and Fields.

And then just as even Daphne was beginning to lose courage, Malcolm dropped in with a letter from his Cousin Fred who had heard of Malcolm's plight and had offered him a small upstate farm rent free as long as he wanted it.

Robert and Daphne had needed no urging and the venture became a real possibility when the accommodating Cousin Fred, on his way to Canada, agreed to take the three to their destination.

It was nearing one when they finished their meager lunch. At half-past one Fred would come to pick them up. Daphne gathered up the paper plates and spoons and was taking one last look from the living room window when the bell boy came to tell Robert that he was wanted on the house phone. Three minutes later he came back, hugged his sister, clapped Malcolm on the back and explained, "It was from Garner and Jones. They want me to come back next Monday. Forty a week to start. Times have been picking up and—"

Daphne's arms about his neck made it impossible for him to go on, then as she gave him his freedom he turned to Malcolm and said: "The first thing I shall do will be to pay you back the $150 I owe you."

Malcolm looked questioningly at Daphne. "I don't suppose it would be just the thing for Daphne and me to go alone to the farm unless she consents to be married on the way."

"We won't talk about that now," said Daphne with a significant emphasis on the last word. "But with Bob paying you back what he owes we won't have to go up. Times surely must be getting better."

"I can get a berth somewhere for four dollars a week and something is likely to turn up next autumn. You know this living on a farm is all right if you're used to it—"

"There are sure to be snakes and spiders," interrupted Daphne, "and if I can't get back as a decorator at Bradley and Fields they'll at least give me a job as an errand girl."

"As far as that goes," Robert assured them, "with forty dollars a week I can look after both of you. That idea of living on a farm didn't seem so hot, with none of us knowing the first thing about farming."

And then Cousin Fred rang the bell and as Daphne opened the door she and Fred and Malcolm all began explaining their change of plans at the same time.

"I'm sorry you can't go along with me," Fred told them when he understood what it was all about. "But I'll say it's good luck, especially as I've had an offer to sell the old place to a neighboring farmer. I was waiting to see how you liked it before I turned him down. Times certainly are picking up."
